Chernenko replaces Yuri Andropov

MOSCOW (CP) — Konstantin Chernenko, the son of Siberian peasants, was named general secretary of the Soviet Communist party today, succeeding the late Yuri Andropov in the Kremlin's most powerful post.

Chernenko, 72, is the oldest man ever selected to lead the 18-million member party, which governs this country of 280 million. For 30 years, he was a close ally of Andropov's predecessor, Leonid Brezhnev, but Andropov outmaneuvered him 15 months ago to become party leader.

In naming Chernenko, the Politburo chose a member of the leadership's old guard rather than giving the reins of power to a member of the younger generation who could be expected to serve a decade or more.

In a speech to the party Central Committee, which appointed him, Chernenko attacked western leaders, saying they posed a threat of nuclear war.

PEACE THROUGH STRENGTH

He said the Soviet Union will strive to avert war by maintaining its nuclear strength.

"Today, in the age of nuclear armaments and super-accurate rockets, peace is as necessary to people as never before," he was quoted by the official Tass news agency as saying.

"Unfortunately some leaders of capitalist countries, judging by everything, do not have a clear understanding of this, or do not want to have it."

"We clearly see the threat which is created today to humanity by the reckless, adventurist actions of the aggressive forces of imperialism, and speak about it in full voice."

The announcement was made by Central Committee through the official news media as the country prepared for the burial Tuesday of Andropov, who died Thursday at 69. Andropov had previously been the oldest man to take over as general secretary of the party at age 68.

Chernenko lacks significant administrative experience, but was the No. 2 man in the governing Politburo after Andropov and was given the job of arranging Andropov's funeral — traditionally a job handled by the successor to power.

Today he led the other 11 members of the Politburo into Moscow's House of Unions, where Andropov's body lies surrounded by flowers.

Official black cars were seen speeding away from the Central Committee building near the Kremlin shortly before noon, indicating that the committee had met.

TRUDEAU ATTENDS

Western diplomats and East European journalists predicted that the Soviets would name a new party leader before Andropov's funeral in Red Square. The funeral, scheduled for noon (4 a.m. EST), will be attended by dozen of world leaders, including Prime Minister Trudeau.

Chernenko has been viewed as a front-runner in the succession struggle since the Soviet Union went into mourning for Andropov after his death was announced Friday.

Yet western diplomats had speculated that the elderly Chernenko's health might weigh against him. He was admitted to hospital with pneumonia last spring and missed one of the Politburo's key public appearances, the May 1 Red Square parade.

Meeting offered

VANCOUVER (CP) — The leader of the Canadian Paperworkers Union says he will recommend to union delegates at a paperworkers strategy session that the union return to the bargaining table with the pulp and paper industry this week.

"Their lockout is absolutely ridiculous and I don't hold out much hope for a quick settlement," Gruntman said in an interview Sunday. "But I'll tell the delegates, 'let's go and meet them' to find out what they have to say."

The 7,200-member union will probably be back at the bargaining table on Wednesday, Gruntman said.

That's the same day that representatives of the 5,500-member Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada are scheduled to meet with industry representatives.

The lockout of the 12,700 pulp and paper employees from 20 mills across B.C., which began Feb. 2, is costing the industry $8 million a day in lost revenue and the workers $2 million a day in lost wages and benefits.

Gruntman said he will follow up today's strategy session with union delegates with a meeting Tuesday with the other pulp union.

Dick Lester, president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, said Sunday the industry has been waiting for the unions to get back to the bargaining table.

MEETING ARRANGED

"The meeting with the PPWC was arranged a couple of weeks ago. We're also ready to meet with the CPU," he said.

The lockout began after the industry had set a deadline for the unions to begin serious negotiations. Industry leaders said they believe unions wanted to wait until spring — when their bargaining position would be better — to start serious talks.

The unions said the companies dragged their feet during bargaining for eight months then suddenly decided it was time to settle.

The unions say they will not accept a three-year contract or any collective agreement concessions and they want pension increases at least in line with the cost of living. The industry insists it needs a three-year deal for stability and has asked for concessions on holidays.

Complicating the dispute is an agreement reached in December between the industry and the International Woodworkers of America, which was a three-year deal with a wage freeze in the first year, four in the second and 4.5 per cent in the third year.

Street fighting subsides

BEIRUT (AP) — Street fighting and artillery barrages around Beirut subsided today after government spokesmen said they will step up efforts to give Lebanon's Moslem majority greater power.

President Amin Gemayel rejected demands by opposition leaders that he resign, but said he hopes to convene within two weeks a national reconciliation conference in Geneva.

Gemayel also told reporters Sunday he expects the multinational force to remain in Lebanon. He said the plan to withdraw U.S. Marines to ships offshore was just a "detail."

"I am confident that President Reagan is fully committed to help Lebanon," he said.

It was Gemayel's first public statement since rebels seized control of West Beirut, the Moslem half of the capital, in battles with the Lebanese army last week.

Gemayel said a cabinet to replace that of Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan will be formed at the reconciliation conference. Wazzan resigned Feb. 4 but Gemayel asked him to stay on until a new government is formed.

PROPOSES PLAN

Foreign Minister Elie Salem told reporters in Beit Mary, 10 kilometres east of Beirut, that Gemayel will propose a 20-point program of political and constitutional reforms at the Geneva conference.

A shakeup in Lebanon's Christian-dominated political structure is a key demand of the rebels.

Salem said the plan will give Moslems equal representation in parliament instead of the current 6-5 percentage in favor of the Christians and create a senate in which all sects will be represented.

Under the plan, the president, traditionally a Maronite Catholic, will be elected by a minimum of 55 votes in the 99-member parliament. At present, the president is elected by a two-thirds vote on the first ballot or by a simple majority on subsequent ballots.

Gemayel's reform also will make the prime minister, traditionally a Sunni Moslem, elected by parliament instead of being named by the president, Salem said.

There was no immediate reaction from the leaders of the Shiite Moslem or Druse militias to the statements, although the groups have recently toned down demands that Gemayel resign.

However, a major demand of the Gemayel's opponents is that he abrogate the U.S.-mediated troops withdrawal agreement he signed with Israel.

OPPOSE THE ACCORD

The accord has been a thorny issue since it was signed. Its cancellation has been a principal demand of the Syrian-backed opposition and Syria because it would legalize a permanent Israeli security presence in southern Lebanon.

Gemayel has refused ratification, but he has also refused cancellation, because the accord binds Israel eventually to withdraw. He wants guarantees that Syria will pull out its troops if the Israelis go.

Under recent heavy pressure, Gemayel has said he will discuss any alternative to the accord that will rid Lebanon of Syrian and Israeli troops.

But in an apparent warning to Washington and Gemayel, Israel said Sunday it will keep its troops in southern Lebanon if the agreement is scrapped.

Former Lebanese president Camille Chamoun said many Lebanese want the agreement ratified as "the only means of liberating Lebanese territory from Israeli occupation."

"Abrogation of the agreement exposes this vast part of Lebanon to a long and maybe final occupation," he said.

FUTURE IS CLOUDY

Gemayel's appearance before the foreign press was his first since his U.S. armed and trained army lost control of Moslem West Beirut. But he refused to respond directly to questions about his political future.

Gemayel said only that he hopes to form a broad-based government and said agreement on this will be reached "in the near future," probably during the next round of reconciliation talks in Geneva.

Most observers feel Gemayel has little alternative but to negotiate. Western and Lebanese military sources said the Lebanese army has been severely weakened because about a third of its 21,000-member combat force has refused to fight or has been neutralized.

The army, like Lebanon is a whole, has a majority of Moslems, and many refused to fire on Islamic rebels when major fighting erupted last week.

TERRACE — The video war is on, and Tillicum Theatre owner, Bill Young plans to fight the growing video craze by joining in the battle and selling video movies through the theatre.

He says he has discussed this with theatre owners throughout the province, and they agree that this would be the only alternative to going out of business.

But is business really that bad?

"You better believe it is," says Young, "When times are good I used to pay between two and three thousand dollars a week for movie rental. Nowadays, it's more like $60 a week, so how are we supposed to keep our doors open?"

The common complaint of most independent theatre owners, not only here in B.C., but in all of Canada, is that movie distributors are releasing video movie cassettes to close to the opening date of the first movie films.

The small, suburban theatres are faced with growing competition from major circuit T.V., cable T.V., and over the last few years, video movie cassettes.

According to Young, the demise of the small town theatre is inevitable, if the theatres cannot procure first-run movies, or hot second-run movies before the video outlets get a hold of them.

It is his opinion that the distributors are just trying to get the most out of both markets by releasing videos and films at the same time, but in reality, it's the small theatre owners that are going to suffer.

He feels that in order for any film to have significance it has to perform in the theatres first and then it can be released to the ancillary markets.

"The theatre creates the 'want to see' attitude in the public, and this is what the distributors should be concentrating on," he says.

What ends up happening is that video retail outlets get the video before the theatre gets the movie, thereby creating a loss in revenue for the theatre owner.

And if the distributors don't release videos at the same time as films, they don't wait too long before they do make it available.

Young explains that recently, Twentieth Century Fox made an announcement regarding their video release policy.

They will now exercise the right to release video movies of first run films only 90 days after the film has been released.

The problem with that is that the studio is calculating the release date for the video on when the film opened up in Los Angeles or New York.

By the time the film has come to the suburban theatre, the video will already be available to the home market, cutting further into the revenue of the theatre owners.

He says this will spell disaster for many small theatre owners who are already finding it difficult to stay in business at present.

So what can theatre owner's do, to counteract this growing concern among themselves?

"Well," says Young, "videos are films, and as such, they are related to what we're showing in the theatres. So if they're related, why don't we start making them available through the theatre as well."

He says he has been discussing this possibility with other theatre owners and they agree that this is a step that will have to be taken.

Young says that selling video movies from his theatre would be the ideal solution to the problem because not only is there a building from which to sell from, but the customer base is already there, and as well, new staff do not have to be hired.

Another possibility for theatre owners is the formation of a co-operative association amongst themselves, but he says that this is something that's still on the drawing board.

Bill Young is definitely going ahead with his plans to rent videos from his theatre, and when he does, he will probably be the first in B.C. to do so.

It's just another concession that theatre owners have to make to advancing technology.

In the '30s it was radio, in the '50s it was television, and now it's video movies.

Bill Young has plans for his theatre, plans he hopes will keep his operation a viable one.

Watson still determined

FORT NELSON, B.C.

(CP) — Despite the problems it has encountered, Project Wolf says it's still determined to disrupt the B.C. government's wolf-kill program.

Led by environmentalist Paul Watson, the protesters arrived in this northeastern B.C. community a week ago bent on thwarting the government's plans to kill about 400 wolves in a 14,000-square kilometre area in the rugged Kechika Valley.

The government maintains the program is necessary, saying an overpopulation of wolves is responsible for declining numbers of moose, elk and caribou.

But Watson says the purpose of the kill is to turn the valley into an elk and stone sheep farm for hunters, thereby benefiting a local resort operator who caters to big-game hunters.

Watson, internationally known for his efforts to stop the killing of whales and seals, hasn't had an easy time of it in this campaign.

Soon after the group arrived in Fort Nelson, it was refused accommodation. Watson then had trouble getting his campaign airborne when gasoline dealers refused to supply him with fuel for a twin-engine aircraft the group had chartered.

Watson later decided he needed a helicopter to mount a more effective campaign, but aviation operators refused to rent him one. When one was finally obtained from one of the news crews following his exploits, Watson said it "mysteriously developed a rotor engine problem."

Almost out of funds, Watson and six other protesters then decided on a ground assault — a 100-kilometre trek in the snow-covered wilderness to confront government hunters at their base camp.

They were ill-equipped with one snowmobile, a small CB radio and a .22-calibre rifle.

Three of the seven had to limp back to town, one suffering from frostbite.

But, all is not lost. The Caska Indian band supplied the remaining four with snowshoes and says it will also provide them with two snowmobiles, said Al

Johnson, a spokesman for the group.

And Clint Davy, a Vancouver spokesman for Project Wolf, said Sunday that Watson is still hoping to be able to get his hands on a helicopter — possibly today.

Davy said the protesters have been making financial negotiations with a helicopter operator in Dease Lake and hope to obtain an aircraft to ferry them into the hunters' camp. But they would only be able to use it for about six hours, he added.

Should the protesters reach the camp by air, their next step "will depend on the reception they get there," said Davy. "The intent is to talk to (government biologist John) Elliott and tell him our views."

SEEK INJUNCTION

Starlet Lum, Watson's wife, said Sunday the group's lawyer will try Tuesday or Wednesday to get a court injunction to stop the hunt.

Meanwhile, Don Morberg, an information officer with the provincial fish and wildlife branch who has been in regular radio contact with Elliott, said the hunters killed two wolves Sunday — bringing to 58 the number of wolves killed.

Morberg said in a telephone interview from Prince George that Elliott, who is due to leave the area Feb. 17 for a break, has been told the protesters are hiking in by foot.

"But he didn't have any reaction to that,"

Morberg also said it's ironic that the wolf-kill program is being conducted under the direction of the Environment Ministry, which also handles search and rescue operations.

"If the worst happened and they (Watson's group) had to be rescued, it could be kind of funny. I don't know if they'd want to be rescued by us."

Man stabbed

TERRACE — As the result of an early morning stabbing incident on Feb. 12, a Kiltmat man has been charged with assault causing bodily harm.

The incident took place at the Coachman Apartments Sunday at approximately 8 a.m. in an apartment occupied by four males and one female.

A dispute erupted and resulted in one male slashing another male across the face with a knife.

The injured man was taken to Mills Memorial Hospital and treated for lacerations on the cheek and nose, and was later released.

Brian Vickers, of Kiltmat, has been charged with assault to cause bodily harm, and will appear in court today.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

It is disconcerting to realize that in this decade of technological escalation and profusion of knowledge there exists an enlarging segment of society so remote from physical contact with that part of the world where animal habitat has yet to be damned, high-rised or hard-topped forever sway, that it remains incredibly ignorant of what actually occurs outside its urban-universe.

Quite more alarming is the realization that this misguided segment is promoting, through its ignorance, the annihilation of several essential, locally depended-upon food species, to the temporary benefit of an overly-successful, albeit fascinating, species; the voracious timberwolf, a predator that is infinitely different from the gelded, raised-in-the-parlour-on-krumbles four-legged movie star.

But perhaps I'm equally as naive and trusting as are the project wolves, if I can't recognize that a "con game", especially of such histrionic proportions, is being played on that deludable company of tenderfeet by certain self-appointed determiners of human activity who conceive "laws of convenience" and masquerade in the guise of concerned environmentalists; who self-righteously profess knowledge and concern about an animal species of which they know absolutely nothing, and probably care less about, while furthering their own gains and fame. A fame often revealed as mischievous infamy.

Contraposed to this league, but no less concerned with the quality of nature, is an authorized, specifically instructed organization of professionals, headed by the honorable Tony Brummet, minister of the environment, MLA for the precise area in question and one who understands his balliwick very thoroughly.

Mr. Brummet was not elected by voters in Hookertown, Lightning-Strikeville, Phoneywood or Haggisburg. Yet they, whose communities pose far more challenges than they can begin to meet, have the audacity to tell Mr. Brummet how to run his ministry! What insolent fatuity!

Mr. Brummet was elected, rather, by those habitually sensible, environmentally oriented, mind-their-own-business constituents of his home riding in northeastern B.C. Anyone who knows Tony Brummet, knows him to be an intelligent, logical, practical and straightforward person, disposed to using common sense in all he does.

He is the antithesis of the Paul Watsons, George C. Scotts and the many ignorant, egotistical, meddling guardians-of-whatever-invokes-the-greatest-media-coverage hypocrites who are ever on the hunt for new "bandwagons" to scurry onto; "do-gooders", who, like the wolves they espouse, have probing noses and far-echoing howls. A clique, of the coin's opposite face, to the unpretentious, mind-their-own-business residents of the northern hinterland, be those residents humans or ungulates. Let Mr. Brummet and his associates do their jobs without any more of this maudlin contrariness!

Unfortunately, no permanent cure has yet been developed for cranioprotocoitus, so project wolf will likely become epidemic before it runs its course. Poor moose! I think I'd rather take my chance on being a wolf; it's good to have friends who sincerely care.

The Northern Separatist,
James K. Hobart

To the Editor,

On May 1, 1984 the provincial government plans to shut down permanently David Thompson University Centre in Nelson.

I ask you to consider what is being closed down: 1. B.C.'s only degree-granting post-secondary institution east of the Lower Mainland. 2. An institution which offers courses in rural education and writing which are unavailable elsewhere in Canada. 3. An institution whose offerings in the performing arts (music, theatre) and the visual arts attract students from all corners of the province for their quality and unique structure. 4. Over 100 jobs - the wealth, resources and talents of 100 families in a community already racked by a 27 per cent unemployment rate.

The closure of DTUC will deal a tremendous blow to our local economy. But it is far from being a local issue. Education in all the province is the responsibility of all the people. It is our collective commitment to the future. And in its diversity lies our guarantee for success.

We are realists in Nelson. We know we cannot enjoy all the amenities of the Lower Mainland. We cannot have B.C. Place nor Expo 86, but then these are really the domain of all B.C. citizens. So then is David Thompson University Centre.

The government's closure of DTUC will mark a new height in insensitivity to the needs of the B.C. Interior.

Restraint is not an idea many of us here would quarrel with. It is good to live within your means. It is good to be efficient. If education is an orchard, then it is good to tend it, water it and prune it carefully. But where is the wisdom in choosing one young tree, smaller, fragile, a little different than the rest, and cutting it down completely?

I urge all British Columbians to write to the Honourable Mr. Heinrich to share with him their feelings on this issue. It is not just a local issue. If DTUC falls, more will follow for the message will then be clearly sent: the people do not care.

Sincerely,
B. Deon

Western leaders sense better relations ahead

LONDON (Reuters) — The West senses an opening for better relations with Moscow after the death of Yuri Andropov and the appointment of Konstantin Chernenko as head of the Soviet Communist party, but the western leaders seem split on just how to pursue it.

Chernenko, at 72 the oldest man to assume the most powerful Soviet post and a member of the Kremlin leadership's old guard, is expected to continue Andropov's policies, at least for the time being. Although the western governments have called for improved relations with the new Soviet leadership after months of East-West strain, some leaders have adopted an active role in the search for a thaw and others remain cautious.

The different approaches were clearly demonstrated when leaders such as West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher decided to attend Tuesday's Red Square funeral for Andropov while presidents Ronald Reagan of the United States and Francois Mitterrand of France opted to stay home.

Washington, sending Vice-President George Bush to the funeral, has consistently held the option of highest level U.S.-Soviet meetings in reserve pending assurances of success.

West Germany, among Washington's closest European allies, has long advocated summits to reduce tension. One "cannot conduct business without personal contacts and knowledge of the people on the other side," a West German diplomat said.

MET ANDROPOV

Kohl is the only western leader to have met with Andropov during the late president's 15-month term in office.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who also will attend the funeral, had wanted to meet with Andropov to promote his East-West peace initiative but the meeting never came about, although Andropov sent Trudeau a letter indicating interest in the Canadian leader's peace effort.

Bush said Sunday the change of Kremlin leadership is an opening for better relations, but he made clear after meeting with Thatcher that Washington does not believe the level of representation at the funeral is of supreme importance.

"The president (Reagan) did not go to President (Leonid) Brezhnev's funeral (in November 1982) and the relationships certainly haven't dramatically improved since then," he told reporters.

"I think more important in his case than the form is the substance. And the substance is that I will be making clear to those who I might see (in Moscow) ... his desire for peaceful relationships."

Bush said that many of the Reagan administration's Soviet experts felt it would be inappropriate for Reagan to go to Moscow at present.

Thatcher has clearly adopted different tactics. Thatcher, once labelled "Iron Lady" by Moscow, visited Hungary 11 days ago on her first trip to a Soviet bloc country since assuming power in 1979.

The ice-breaking visit was regarded by western diplomats as representing softer signals to Moscow at a time when Reagan was also adopting a slightly mellow tone in his speeches.

Sir James Eberle, a leading British expert on East-West relations, "supported Reagan's decision not to attend Andropov's funeral, saying that after levels of rhetoric between the two leaders had peaked recently, a visit by the U.S. president to Moscow at this stage would have been 'too much of a swing.'"

"What the Soviets dislike most is inconsistency," said Eberle, director of the Royal Institute For International Affairs in London.

Kit raises new fears

WINNIPEG (CP) — A kit designed to help spot communicable diseases and drug abuse in the classroom is raising fears that some teachers may be tempted to play doctor.

The information kit, developed by two University of Manitoba professors, comes along at a time when some health authorities believe teachers should stop relying on school nurses to spot illness and look more closely for signs of problems themselves.

But the project has also prompted concern that teachers will be encouraged to make diagnostic decisions better left to doctors.

Herb Thompson, director of program delivery for the Alcoholism Foundation of Manitoba, says teachers need to be trained to spot "inappropriate behavior, but not to diagnose what the problem is."

Thompson said no one wants or expects teachers to "sit there saying: 'Is that a marijuana problem or a cocaine problem or an alcohol problem?' We just want teachers to recognize there is a problem and refer it to the appropriate resource."

The kit, designed by James Walsh, assistant dean of education, and former dean Eric MacPherson with a $30,000 federal grant, contains videotapes and written material on drug abuse, health disorders and communicable diseases.

Walsh said in an interview that the kits, which are expected to be available to Manitoba school divisions and education students next fall, emphasize identification and referral of health problems — not diagnosis.

"We don't want teachers to think they're doctors, but we want them to know what to look for and whom to contact," he said. "It's something teachers have had no training in and we thought it was important to give them something."

"Next to parents, teachers see students more than any other adult and are in a position to see any kids who are not behaving the way they should."

Dr. Margaret Fast, assistant provincial epidemiologist, says communicable diseases are not a current problem in Manitoba schools, but another official disagreed strongly.

Dr. Doug Lockhurst, Winnipeg's deputy medical officer, said serious infectious diseases are an ever-present threat to students.

"Whenever you have people gathered together in an institution the opportunity for the spread of infection is much greater than if they were in their own homes. If you don't find communicable disease in schools, you're just not looking for it," he said. He said the kit could help teachers reduce the spread of potentially dangerous illnesses.

"We've always felt that teachers ought not to rely totally on the school nurse to do their medical assessments for them," Lockhurst said. "There's a lot of illness that doesn't come to the attention of the nurse."

Lice, rubella, hepatitis, diphtheria and scarlet fever are among conditions identified Winnipeg schools so far this school year, and Thompson said drug abuse continues to plague the school system.

Shoplifters emotional?

TORONTO (CP) — Chronic shoplifters are not usually hardened criminals, but middle-aged women with emotional problems, says a woman who organized a self-help group for shoplifters.

Linda Berry says the average shoplifter seldom does so out of need or greed and the items they steal are, more often than not, senseless.

They also usually have enough money on hand to pay for items they try to steal, says Berry, who helped the Peel-Hallon branch of the Elizabeth Fry Society set up a Help For Shoplifters program in nearby Mississauga in 1981.

Berry, 28, who studied psychology at York University in Toronto, says only three per cent of the 200 case she's dealt with, women convicted at least five times of shoplifting, have returned to crime.

But she says police, business and counsellors are concerned at the increased incidence of shoplifting. A Retail Council of Canada study in 1982 showed that one-third of the retail losses across the country were due to shoplifting.

"It's even more devastating than we suggested," says Berry, whose project receives $25,000 from the provincial government. "Frankly we're at a loss on what to do with them."

TAKES NINE MONTHS

She said the society initiated the program, which takes nine months, after it was notified in court that shoplifters had "substantial amounts of money on them or the income breakdown suggested they didn't need what they were stealing."

The women were "severely traumatized by the court process," she says. "They became tearful and almost hysterical."

User fees accepted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hospital user fees are widely accepted in British Columbia and hospitals must continue to charge them says Health Minister Jim Nielsen said Sunday night.

"We get virtually no complaints about user fees. I think most people appreciate the system," Nielsen said in an interview after getting a warm reception from about 70 B.C. hospital chairmen and administrators at a B.C. Health Association convention Sunday night.

User fees deter people from running to hospitals unnecessarily, he said.

When New Brunswick introduced user fees, he said the province reported "utilization went down by 13 per cent."

Asked if B.C. will retain the fees if the federal government approves the Canada Health Act imposing financial penalties on provinces charging them, Nielsen said: "Sure, there's a chance."

He said Begin's threat to punish provinces charging extra is "a dumb idea — that's being kind."

B.C. would lose $50 million a year if it banished user fees, he said. Hospitals currently charge $10 for a visit to an emergency ward and a minimum $8.50 per day for a hospital bed. Nielsen would not say if the charges will be increased this year.

Most provincial health ministers oppose Begin's Canada Health Act. But, the federal Progressive Conservatives threw their support behind it in December, in what Nielsen called a "wisely chosen" move to stop it from becoming a national election issue.

Nielsen argued that a "new federal government" would be more receptive to B.C.'s plea that it "be allowed to run our own health care system" without interference from Ottawa.

Nielsen complimented the hospital chairmen for cooperating with the provincial government in its attempt to keep down hospital costs.

The media and the NDP, he charged, "would prefer to believe that there is a tremendous amount of stress and nobody is getting along" within B.C.'s health system.

He told the delegates that they will be "reasonably pleased" with provincial budget plans for the 1984-85 fiscal year.

Chinese women celebrate

More than 2,000 lawyers and law teachers provided free advice to women at 108 booths set up at shopping centres, parks, railway stations and other public places.

On a sunny winter's day, thousands of women took advantage of the publicity campaign, organized by the municipal government.

Article 48 of the Chinese constitution states: "Women in the People's Republic of China enjoy equal rights with men in all spheres of life, political, economic, cultural and social, including family life."

Article 49 adds that "mother and child are protected by the state" and maltreatment of women and children is prohibited.

But the official Chinese press increasingly reports complaints from women about discrimination and maltreatment, including wife-beating.

Most Chinese women work and many complain that when they get home, they still are expected to do the cooking and cleaning. Although officially frowned on, divorce is becoming more common.

Marital problems and the right of women to inherit family property were among topics raised with lawyers Sunday, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

At an information booth outside the Wangfujing department store in the centre of Peking, a 31-year-old woman complained that her husband often beat her and lawyers advised her to bring a suit against him in a local court, Xinhua reported.

Cui Hu, director of the city's Judicial Bureau, said: "We first organized such activities last year, which were well received because they helped the citizens raise their awareness of the legal system."

There will be more such publicity in the future, he said.

Jim Ryan leads the Caledonia Secondary School band in a modified version of the soundtrack from the hit film, "Flashdance" at Kitimat's Mount Elizabeth Theatre on Friday, Feb. 10. Terrace took part in the three-city band extravaganza. The event was the 1984 Band Extravaganza and was to be made up of three bands, one each from Prince Rupert, Terrace, and Kitimat. Unfortunately, due to a measles epidemic in Prince Rupert, that city's band could not participate in the weekend's event.

Soviet people unsurprised

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Most Soviet people greeted the news of Konstantin Chernenko's appointment today as Communist party general secretary with little surprise.

"Who else could have taken on this responsibility?" one young man asked. "He has the right experience."

Another man, shoulders hunched against the cold, said Chernenko is the obvious successor as party chief and added: "He won't change Andropov's policies, but the emphasis might shift."

Chernenko's appointment was announced on state television and radio, four days after the death of Soviet leader Yuri Andropov.

Soon after the news was broadcast, two old women stood in the bright sunshine outside a bakery discussing Chernenko, who at 72 is the oldest man to take over in the Kremlin.

"Maybe young (52-year-old Mikhail) Gorbachev would have been better," said one of the women, well into their 60s.

"Nonsense," her friend replied. "This is no job for a young man. Chernenko is reliable and I'm sure he will carry on Andropov's policy of peace."

A third woman echoed a common view, saying she hopes Chernenko will continue Andropov's strict approach to law and order. "Andropov was just beginning to succeed there," she said.

At the entrance to Moscow's Central Market, a man said he does not know whether there will be a change in policy under Chernenko. "Let the men who matter decide that," he said.

Asked whether he thinks the reported differences between Chernenko and Andropov are important he said: "What differences? They were all good friends in the Politburo."

Police ordered to return funds to bank

TORONTO (CP) — Police were ordered today to return to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce more than $30,000 of the $10.2 million in bank funds that Brian Patrick Molony gambled away in Atlantic City casinos.

Edward Greenspan, Molony's lawyer, successfully introduced a motion requiring that the money seized by police at the time of Molony's arrest be returned to the bank where he used to work.

The money amounted to $28,310.45 in U.S. funds and $411 in Canadian funds.

Greenspan told reporters outside the court that although his client is working, he is "penniless." He refused to say what type of work Molony, 29, is doing.

Molony's sentencing, originally scheduled for today, was postponed until March 22.

Greenspan requested the postponement because Dr. Robin Custer, a U.S. psychiatrist specializing in pathological gambling, was unable to come to Toronto to testify today at the sentencing hearing.

Through an elaborate nexus of false companies and phoney loans, Molony defrauded the bank of $10.4 million in Canadian funds and $5 million (U.S.) between 1980 and 1982.

Crown counsel Peter DeJulio put the net amount lost by the bank at $10.2 million because Molony repaid some of the money.

Molony pleaded guilty in November to what police say may be the largest fraud in Canadian history.

Court was told he made 37 trips between January 1981 and April 1982 to Caesar's Boardwalk Regency casino and also admitted that between February 1980 and April 1982 he obtained money by making 93 loan transactions with the bank.

At times, the $30,000-a-year assistant bank manager would blow $60,000 at the throw of a dice.

He was qualified to approve loans up to $35,000 and his manager, not asking questions of his trusted assistant, approved larger loans of up to $100,000.

Last April 27, just hours after he had lost about $1 million in the baccarat pit, Molony was stopped for speeding on his way to work from the Toronto airport.

Court was told that because Molony was such a good customer, he would be flown to Atlantic City at the casino's expense after work. He would return to Toronto the next morning in time to catch a few hours sleep and be back at his desk.

The bank is taking legal action to recover almost $6 million of embezzled funds.

The first step came when the bank won an Ontario Supreme Court motion asking for an injunction freezing $1.42 million (U.S.) held by the casino in a Toronto bank.

The bank alleges that the Atlantic City casino induced Molony to gamble and lose millions.

Fisherman seeks alternative

VANCOUVER (CP) — West Coast fishermen, many deep in debt because of poor catches and rising operating costs, should consider an alternative occupation if Ottawa goes ahead with plans to implement stringent new regulations, says frustrated troller Ron Fowler.

Fowler, describing fishermen as angry and confused about their futures, said a meeting Sunday night with federal Fisheries Minister Pierre De Bane was like "banging your head against the wall."

"There's nothing that came out of this meeting for fishermen," said Fowler, a leader of the fishermen's survival lobby. "What we need now at this particular time is hope for the future and there's been nothing given to us that indicates in any way, shape or form that there's any hope for the future."

About 60 members of the survival lobby, which took its campaign for an orderly rationalization of the Pacific fleet to Ottawa last week, quizzed De Bane for two hours at a closed meeting in a downtown hotel.

NO COMMITMENT

Fowler, vice-president of the Pacific Trollers Association, said there was no commitment from the minister to salmon enhancement and no commitment to protect the habitat.

"Our recommendations have been totally ignored," De Bane, while insisting he recognizes the need for better management of the resource, refused in an interview to give specifics about changes. "I keep my recommendations to myself."

Among the proposed changes — many recommended in the 1982 West Coast fishery inquiry report by economist Peter Pearce — are a $100-million buy-back of boats, quotas on each remaining boat and royalties on catches to pay for the buy-back.

De Bane hinted Saturday that the buy-back — advocated by fishermen provided it is accompanied by an intensified salmon enhancement program — may be put on the back burner.

Asked about such a plan, the minister responded: "Should the taxpayers' money be used to buy back the boats of ... bad managers?"

He did not specify how any buy-back scheme would be funded.

Conservative fisheries critic John Fraser, who was to announce his party's plan for the West Coast fishery today, told the B.C. Steelhead Association that a buy-back has to be part of the solution.

NO MONEY

"It's obvious the Treasury Board has decided there is no money for a buy-back because politically there would be no return for the government."

Rob Rezansoff, another leader of the survival group, said it appears De Bane is planning to go ahead with area licensing and transferable quotas.

"The minister again made the comment on transferable quotas and fishermen buying each other out," said Rezansoff, head of the salmon seiners' association. "My God, we haven't got enough money to survive on now. What are we going to do with transferable quotas. It's the demise of the fishing fleet."

Rezansoff said De Bane wants to change the entire direction of the industry from a common property to a privatized resource.

"He says the time of the common property is over. For the coastal fishing communities, for every fisherman on this coast it means a total complete change in their way of life."

Information demanded

WINNIPEG (CP) — The parents of two part-time soldiers who were killed when their military Jeep flipped over last summer are fighting to get more information about the teenagers' deaths.

They've gathered a 2,800-name petition asking the Department of National Defence to release documents on the accident.

"All we ask is that they come forward and tell us what really happened," said Edna Krosney, mother of one of the Winnipeg reservists. "Peace of mind is what we are after."

Darren Krosney, 18, and Rodney Laurendeau, 17, were killed Aug. 21 when their Jeep upset in a military convoy on the Trans-Canada Highway near Moosomin, Sask.

They were returning to Winnipeg from six weeks of Canadian Armed Forces militia exercises at Dundurn, Sask.

Krosney said in an interview she and Laurendeau's parents have questions about how the accident happened, but the Defence Department has so far refused to release transcripts from the military inquiry.

A letter from the department says the armed forces doesn't want to make the information public in order to ensure witnesses at future military inquiries are frank and willing to speak.

Krosney said they have received conflicting reports from the RCMP, coroner and pathologist about the cause of the accident, how the vehicle rolled over and even at what time the boys died.

Krosney also wonders why the youths were driving in a 30-vehicle convoy on the Trans-Canada Highway when neither had a provincial driving licence. Darren Krosney, who was driving, had a military licence.

However, Krosney said her son only learned to drive during his stay at Dundurn.

The open, quarter-ton vehicle he was driving had a 106-millimetre recoilless rifle mounted and was pulling a supply trailer.

"He had no highway experience, no convoy experience and he had never pulled a trailer before," said Krosney. Roland Laurendeau, Rodney's father, said the parents have a right to know more than they've been told.

"The information we've got is unsatisfactory to us," he said.

Bill Blaikie, NDP member of Parliament for Winnipeg-Birds Hill, has taken up the case.

Blaikie told a news conference Saturday he has already asked Defence Minister Jean-Jacques Blais about the matter informally.

"His only response was that military inquiries are not public and I should try the freedom of information route which is something I don't think MPs should have to do," Blaikie told reporters.

Gagner leads Canada in Norwegian rout

SARAJEVO (CP) — Dave Gagner of Chatham, Ont., scored three goals and added two assists as Canada Olympic hockey team kept its unblemished record intact at the Winter Games with an 8-1 rout of Norway today.

It was the fourth win in as many games for Canada in the preliminary round. Canada would qualify for the medals round if Czechoslovakia, 3-0, defeated Finland, 2-1, as expected in a game later today.

A Finnish victory would set up the possibility of a tie between those three squads for the two medal-round berths for the group. It would be broken by goal differential.

Canada finishes the preliminary round Wednesday against Czechoslovakia while Finland plays the United States.

The Canadians took a 3-0 lead on first-period goals by Russ Courtnall of Duncan, B.C., and Darren Lowe of Toronto, and a second-period score by Pat Flatley, also of Toronto.

Gagner, a first-round draft pick last year by New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, got his first goal at 14:14 of the second period. After getting the puck from Courtnall, Gagner broke in alone, faked goalie Joern Goldstein to the ice and went right to left across the slot to lift the puck over the goalie.

Bruce Driver, also of Toronto, assisted by Gagner and James Patrick of Winnipeg, scored on a slapshot from the left point at 17:57 to give Canada a 5-0 lead going into the third period. Gagner and Courtnall got assists on a goal by Jean-Jacques Daigneault of Montreal at 6:37 of the final period.

Three minutes later Daigneault fed Gagner at the right corner of the crease for the seventh goal.

Mario Gosselin of Thetford Mines, Que., blanked Norway for the first two periods and was replaced by Darren Elliot of Milton, Ont., at the start of the third. Stephen Foyn spoiled the shutout with a goal at 16:44.

Gagner capped the scoring at 18:18 with an unassisted goal.

Penalties — Darrel Can, Foyn Nor 0:45; Flatley Can 5:38; Jarsto Nor 12:21.

Edmonton average without Gretzky

Critics who claim Edmonton Oilers are merely an average National Hockey League entry without Wayne Gretzky have been handed a full can of fuel to feed the debate.

With Gretzky and linemate Jari Kurri out with injuries, the Oilers have lost five in a row, including an 11-0 embarrassment Sunday at the hands of Hartford Whalers.

The Oilers were 4-1 losers Saturday in Boston, where former Bruin Normand

Leveille made his first visit since suffering partial paralysis after a brain hemorrhage between periods of a game in Vancouver in October 1982.

Elsewhere Sunday it was: Vancouver Canucks 6, Philadelphia Flyers 5; Calgary Flames 6, Chicago Black Hawks 4 and Detroit Red Wings 2, Winnipeg Jets 2.

Other results Saturday: Toronto Maple Leafs 5, Quebec Nordiques 2; New York Islanders 6, Vancouver 4; Calgary 6, Hartford 3; Buffalo Sabres 4, Montreal Canadiens 3; Washington Capitals 6, Philadelphia 3; Detroit 4, Minnesota North Stars 4; New York Rangers 6, Los Angeles Kings 6; and Chicago 1, St. Louis Blues 1.

In Hartford, Conn., Ron Francis scored four goals, Greg Malone had three and Sylvain Turgeon, Ray Neufeld, Chris Kot-sopoulos and Bobby Crawford one each. Crawford and Mark Johnson each drew three assists.

The Oilers were a step behind all afternoon, trailing 3-0 after 20 minutes and 8-0 after 40, and took out their frustration with glaring infractions.

Midway through the second period, Edmonton's Kevin McClelland was called for intentionally levelling Turgeon with an elbow to the face. The Whalers' power play took advantage, producing four goals within 4:06.

Turgeon was knocked unconscious in the fall, didn't play the rest of the game and is to undergo tests today.

Hartford had only 30 shots, but Edmonton goaltenders Grant Fuhr and Andy Moog had as many problems as their teammates.

Gretzky, who has missed the last six games with a shoulder injury, and Kurri are expected to rejoin the Oilers this week.

Canucks 6 Flyers 5

In Philadelphia, Vancouver forced a tie midway through the third period when Darcy Rota's shot from outside the blue line bounced off the back boards, hit Philadelphia goaltender Pelle Lindbergh and rebounded into the net. With 1:56 left, Dave Williams lost control of the puck as he broke to the net, but Lindbergh allowed the loose puck to slide under him, giving Williams his second goal and the Canucks the two points. Lars Molin, Thomas Gradin and Neil Belland also scored for the Canucks. Tim Kerr had two and Bobby Clarke, Brian Propp and Darryl Sittler one each for the Flyers.

Celtics licked by Philadelphia 76's

Boston Celtics were licking their chops in anticipation of manhandling the crippled Philadelphia 76ers. Instead, it was the Celtics who were licked.

With Julius Erving scoring 30 points and Andrew Toney adding 21, the 76ers rolled to a 109-91 victory over the Celtics in a showdown of National Basketball Association powers Sunday.

Although again playing without Moses Malone and Bobby Jones, the 76ers manhandled the cold-shooting Celtics, owners of the best record in the NBA, for only their third victory in the last nine games.

"Today was our day," said Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham. "It was the best game we had all month."

"Boston's best team in basketball right now, but we came into this game with a great attitude to overcome obstacles. Everything went well for us — rebounding, loose balls, everything."

Boston's Cedric Maxwell, 2-for-8 from the floor and 1-for-7 from the foul line, summed up the Celtics' afternoon.

"We really played stink, stink, stink today," he said.

Elsewhere, it was: Los Angeles Lakers 108, Atlanta Hawks 87; Utah Jazz 114, Portland Trail Blazers 112; Milwaukee Bucks 107, San Diego Clippers 100, in overtime; and New Jersey Nets 107, Houston Rockets 103.

Results Saturday: San Antonio 123, Detroit 116; Cleveland 86, Indiana 83; Chicago 101, Golden State 96; Kansas City 94, Washington 91; New York 138, Denver 112; and Phoenix 108, Dallas 89.

In defeating Boston for the third time in five meetings this season, the 76ers pulled away from a 58-57 lead with a 21-4 spurt. Boston shot only 5-of-24 and scored 12 points in the third period, which ended with Philadelphia in front 79-63.

Larry Bird, who led the Celtics with 25 points but was only 7-of-22 from the floor, called it "one of the poorest efforts I've seen in Boston Garden since I've been here."

Jazz 114 Blazers 112

John Drew's jump shot with three seconds left gave Utah the victory. Drew, who scored 21 of his 23 points in the second half, led a 30-point third-quarter. Utah charge that overcame a nine-point Portland half-time lead. Drew had 14 points in the third period as the Jazz broke Portland's five-game winning streak and handed the Blazers only their third loss in 27 home games.

Jim Paxson, the game's leading scorer with 26 points, hit a 16-footer to tie the score 112-112. Adrian Dantley, who leads the NBA with a 31.0 average, was held to 21 points, 19 in the first half. Wayne Cooper had 21 for Portland.

Lakers 108 Hawks 87

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 26 points and Earvin Johnson added 23 along with 15 assists and 10 rebounds as Los Angeles won its ninth game in the last 10 and sixth in a row at home.

Dan Roundfield had 24 points for Atlanta, which lost its third game in a row and dropped out of a first-place tie in the Central Division.

Bucks 107 Clippers 100

Sidney Moncrief scored 38 points, including eight in overtime. Lorenzo Romar gave the Bucks the lead for good 99-98 with 1:34 to go when Terry Cummings was called for goaltending on Romar's baseline drive. The Bucks also got 16 points each from Bob Lanier and Junior Bridgeman — who hit a 15-foot jumper with nine seconds left in regulation to send the game into overtime at 92-92 — and 12 from Marques Johnson.

Nets 107 Rockets 107

Darryl Dawkins scored 25 points, including three free throws in the final minute. New Jersey hit eight free throws in the final minute, including one by Buck Williams that broke a 99-99 tie and put the Nets ahead to stay. Williams and Albert King each added 19 points for the Nets, while Lewis Lloyd had 21 for the Rockets. Ralph Sampson,

Flames 6 Hawks 4

In Chicago, Dan Quinn scored twice and Mike Eaves, Doug Risebrough, Hakan Look and Richard Kromm once each for Calgary. Tom Lysiak, Dave Feamster, Keith Brown and Steve Larmer replied for the Black Hawks, winless in their last five games.

Jets 2 Wings 2

Goaltender Doug Setaert got the credit for Winnipeg's home-ice tie with Detroit after stopping 32 shots. John Ogronick's 41st goal of the season for Detroit at 19:40 of the second period ended scoring. Rick MacLeish also scored for the Red Wings. Doug Smail and Laurie Boschman scored. Winnipeg's goals.

U.S. a one-two downhill finish

SARAJEVO (CP) — Debbie Armstrong and Chris Cooper scored a stunning 1-2 United States finish today in the women's giant slalom at the Winter Olympics while Canada had to be satisfied with a ninth-place finish by Liisa Savijarvi of Bracebridge, Ont.

Armstrong grabbed the gold medal with a two-run combined time of two minutes, 20.90 seconds. Cooper won the silver in 2:21:38 and Perrine Pelen of France took the bronze in 2:21:40. Tamara McKinney just missed making it a medal sweep for the U.S. when she finished fourth in 2:21:83.

Pre-race favorite Erika Hess of Switzerland, winner of two of the three World Cup giant slaloms this season, was seventh in 2:22:51 and Michela Figini of Switzerland, the strongest skier in training runs, was 12th in 2:23:34.

Armstrong, 20, became the first U.S. alpine gold medalist since Barbara Cochran won the women's slalom at Sapporo in 1972.

In her second year on the American team, Armstrong had never finished higher than third in a World Cup race.

For Savijarvi, who finished in 2:22:73, it was her third top-10 finish in giant slalom this season.

"I thought I could do pretty good here," said Savijarvi.

"After last week's fourth at Ste. Gervais I thought I could do better here but I'm still very pleased."

Savijarvi, who qualified for the Olympics in the downhill, has become Canada's newest skiing star in a discipline often said to be too technically difficult for Canadians who prefer to concentrate on the downhill.

But Canada has done well in giant slalom in the Olympics. Kathy Kreiner won Canada's last Olympic gold medal, in 1976, in the giant slalom. And Nancy Greene dragged Canada into international skiing prominence with her Olympic giant slalom victory in 1968.

But neither of the four Canadians could match either of those previous successes today.

Behind Savijarvi came Diana Haight of Fruitvale, B.C., 17th in 2:24:66 and Laurie Graham of Inglewood, Ont., 33rd in 2:28:42. Andrea Bedard of Sutton, Que., 26th after the first run, was disqualified for missing a gate during the second run.

"On the first run I was running too straight at the gates and I was getting too low and that was costing me a bit of time," Savijarvi said of her first run that had her in ninth position.

"The second run I didn't ski that well on the top pitch, on the ice. But I was fourth at midway so that was pretty good. But I lost it on the bottom."

Haight was 18th after the first run, nearly 2.5 seconds behind the leader, Cooper.

For the second run down the 51-gate, 337-metre course, Haight decided to "just really go for it. I had nothing to lose."

Stevenson wins curling title

QUALICUM BEACH, B.C. (C) — Christine Stevenson of Victoria was in first place in the B.C. junior women's curling championship Sunday after completing all her games but she could still be caught by Krista Thompson of Delta who has one game left today.

Stevenson has a 7-2 win-loss record while Thompson is 6-2. If Thompson wins her game today against Shari Demmon of Golden, who has a 4-4 record, the two rinks will play a tie-breaker.

The winner will go to the Canadian national junior women's championship in Fort St. John March 10 to 17.

Stevenson, who earlier this month won the high school girls curling championship, was up 5-0 in the third end over defending champ Debbie Lanzo of North Vancouver in the eleventh draw Sunday.

The rinks blanked the fourth end and Lanzo picked up two in the fifth and one in the sixth. Stevenson got two in the seventh and Lanzo two in the eighth to make the score 7-5. Lanzo got one more in the ninth but in the tenth Stevenson eliminated Lanzo's rocks to win 7-6.

Lanzo has a 3-5 record and one game left.

Experience wins for Connors

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Experience gave Jimmy Connors the edge he needed over young Henri LeConte as the world's third-ranked player won a record seventh U.S. indoor tennis championship.

"He (LeConte) went for it and he paid the price," said Connors, a 6-3, 6-4, 7-5 winner Sunday when LeConte double faulted at match point.

"I've made a living off playing the big points," said Connors. "They are my favorite situation. It's known as grinding it out and it proves you haven't lost your nerve."

"The difference between Jimmy Connors and me is that he knows how to play the big points," said LeConte. "He's 31 and I'm 20, he's won 101 tournaments and I've won one."

Connors's first championship since the U.S. Open last September was worth $45,000. LeConte earned $22,500.

The match was halted for two minutes during the third set when LeConte collapsed from dehydration.

Fritz Buehnig and Peter Fleming split $15,000 by downing Heinz Gunhardt and Tomas Smid 6-3, 6-0 in the doubles final.

Meanwhile, in Chicago, top-seeded Pam Shriver overcame mid-match troubles to down unseeded Barb Potter 7-4 (7-4), 2-6, 6-3 and win a $150,000 women's tournament. The win was worth $28,000. Potter earned $14,000.

Carling Bassett of Toronto was eliminated 6-3, 6-3 by Wendy Turnbull in quarter-finals Saturday.

tournaments in Terrace over the weekend. Kitimat's grade 8 team won the zone playoff in the boys division and both Ravens took the girls' finals. In the girls' games Skeena opened with a 62-16 win over Thornhill Grade 8's and Booth downed Kitimat 37-27. Skeena then, played Booth and lost a close 34-31 game to the Ravens.

Terrace Trojans hockey results

The Terrace Trojans women's hockey team has had a successful season so far.

The Trojans recently travelled to Fort St. James for their second annual hockey tournament, and came away with third place in the five team event. The team sends their thanks to Ken Schachner of Budget who made travel expenses reasonable. Jeannie Marchildon received best goalie award and the Trojans were named the most sportsmanlike team. In Prince George at the northern winter games the team picked up silver medals, in the eight team competition. The girls are off to Prince Rupert next Sunday.

On Saturday Kitimat downed Thornhill 38-20 in one game and 33-8 in another. Skeena edged Kitimat 36-30 to advance to the final game.

Sun shines in Sarajevo

SARAJEVO (AP) — The sun finally broke through misty clouds around this Winter Olympic city Monday as a four-day blizzard that disrupted the Alpine skiing schedule ended.

men's 15-kilometre cross-country race on nearby Mount Igman both were bathed in sunlight Monday morning.

And on Mount Jahorina, the first Alpine event of the Games — the women's giant slalom — was held after repeated postponements of other Alpine events forced by four days of snow and wind.

Elsewhere in Yugoslavia, residents and travellers began digging out after what has been called the worst storm to hit the country in 20 years.

Five storm-related deaths were reported by the official Tanjug news agency. The extent of property damage could not be determined.

Police appealed to owners of abandoned cars to return to them and help in snow-clearing efforts Monday. Efforts were under way to restore electricity to thousands of homes which lost power due to downed lines. Several villages remained without power Monday, said the Belgrade newspaper Politika.

Most Belgrade papers were forced to limit the number of their pages because newsprint could not be delivered in time.

Downhill skier takes first U.S. gold medal

SARAJEVO (CP) — Slalom skier Debbie Armstrong gave the United States its first gold medal of the Winter Olympics today while Karin Enke became the first triple medalist of the Games by leading East Germany to a 1-2 finish in the women's 1,000-metre speed skating event.

It was a 1-2 finish for the Americans in the women's giant slalom as well with Christine Cooper winning the silver medal. Perrin Pelen of France won the bronze. Armstrong won with a combined time of two minutes 20.98 seconds while teammate Cooper was clocked in 2:21.38. Cooper had led after the first run earlier in the day, but her time of 1:12.51 in the second run dropped her into the silver medal spot.

Pelen prevented a U.S. sweep of the medals by finishing third in 2:21.40. Tamara McKinney of the U.S. was fourth in 2:21.83. Liisa Savijarvi of Bracebridge, Ont., ninth after the first run with a time of 1:10.31, managed only 1:12.42 on the second run and remained ninth with a 2:22.73 total.

Enke, who earlier won the gold medal in the 1,500 metres and the silver in the 500, was clocked in one minute 21.61 seconds today. Teammate Andrea Schoene took the silver, her second of the Games, in 1:22.83 to give East Germany the lead with a total of 14 medals (six gold, six silver and two bronze).

The Soviet Union is next with 13 (three gold, four silver, six bronze). Natalie Grenier of Ste-Foy, Que., was 18th in the women's speed skating with a time of 1:27.67 and Sylvie Daigle of Sherbrooke, Que., finished 25th in 1:28.96.

GOLD AGAIN Sweden's Gunde Svan collected his second medal of the Games, winning the gold in the men's 15-kilometre cross-country ski race. Svan, who earlier won a bronze in the 30-kilometre event, was timed in 41:25.6 to finish ahead of two Finns, Aki Karvonen (41:34.9) and Harri Kirvesniemi (41:45.6).

Pierre Laroche of Stoneham, Que., was 22nd in the field of 91 with a time of 43:36.4. The United States, which collected its first medal Sunday night in the pairs figure skating, started off the way to another expected gold today when three-time world champion Scott Hamilton took the lead in the men's singles figure skating event after the compulsory figures. Jean-Christophe Simond of France was second and West German Rudi Cerne third.

Omineca takes TCHL tourney

The Terrace Omineca Allstars pulled off a come from behind 8-5 win over Kitimat Junior B Black Hawks in the final game of the 11th annual commercial hockey tournament on Sunday to take home the Herald trophy and the winning prize money.

Terrace battled Kitimat teams during the entire tournament. In round-robin play the Black Hawks defeated the Terrace Allstars in overtime to take first place in their division and in a semi-final game Terrace needed a shootout to defeat Kitimat Allstars 4-3 to advance to the final game.

In the final game Kitimat took an early period lead when Jay Glass scored from Jerry Choinicki. Four minutes later it was Regan Desroche scoring for Kitimat to give the Hawks a 2-0 lead at the end of one.

Desroche made it 3-0 with his second goal at 4:51 of the game as Omineca began to look tired.

Pete Tichner broke the Terrace silence at 9:15 and the Allstars came to life. Richard Kolner hit the mark from Larry Swanson and Mike Larock and the Kitimat lead was cut to one.

Tracy Camazola opened a birage of scoring late in the second period with his goal at 16:24 on a Kitimat power-play. Steve Forrest connected a minute later to put Kitimat up by three. Then it was Mike Lablond scoring for Terrace with just under two minutes left in the period and Doug Thomson got a power-play goal with just 32 seconds left in the period to put Terrace back within one.

In the third period it was all Terrace scoring as the Black Hawks had a tough time with Wade Flaherty in goal for Terrace. Darcy Mallett got the tying and winning goals on two Terrace power-plays. He scored the tying goal at 5:14 of the third period and got the go ahead goal at 15:37. Chris Reneerkens added icing to the cake at 17:52 and Lance Legouffe got the empty net goal to give Omineca the 8-5 win.

Wade Flaherty was named most valuable player of the tournament, Chris Reneerkens won the scoring trophy and Mike Lablond was named best defenceman. For Kitimat Floyd Reinfell was named best goalie.

In semi-final action it was the Hawks defeating Rupert Jr. 5-3. Kitimat got goals from Dan Markert and pairs on goals from Steve Nelson and Emil Gagnon. For Rupert it was Paul Baker picking up a pair and Ed Boudreau adding one.

In the other semi-final game it was Lance Legouffe's shootout goal after double overtime that was credited as the winning goal to give Omineca the 4-3 win over Kitimat Allstars. The two teams played to a 3-3 tie after regulation time and added two periods of overtime before going to the shootout. Each team was given three shots on goal penalty shot style. Terrace threw out of three while Kitimat could only manage to put two past Flaherty.

In the consolation game Kitimat Allstars handled Prince Rupert easily 6-2. Kitimat got goals from Minaker, Ron Wakita, Tony Harmell, Scott Marleau, and two from Brad Owen. Rob Toye scored both Prince RUPERT GOALS.

Kitimat Allstars 16 Terrace 8
In the opening game of the tournament Kitimat commercial Allstars bombed the Terrace B team 16-0. Scott Marleau had four goals and Barry Boudreau picked up a hat trick to pace Kitimat.

Black Hawks 7 Omineca 6
The two top teams of the tournament met in round-robin play and gave fans an exciting fast paced game. Kitimat came up with the win in overtime with a goal from Jay Glass.

Other scorers for Kitimat were Regan Desroche, Steve Forrest, Mike Stephonavicus, Don McMartin, and Emil Gagnon. For Terrace it was Tim Kolner, Darcy Mallett, Pete Tichner, Mike Lablond with a pair, and Richard Kolner. Hazelton 6 Juveniles 3

Hazelton got four third period goals to put the Terrace Chrysler Juveniles down 6-3 in the late game Friday night. Hazelton got two goals from Dave Wakefield, and singles from Gerald Starr, Rich Simms, John David and Ian Tromblay. For the Juveniles it was Dave Kawinsky, Steve Turner, and Rod Philpot.

Black Hawks 8 Hazelton 5
Kitimat got two goals each from Lou Parent and Jerry Choinicki to lead the Hawks to their second round-robin victory. Hazelton was shutout in the first period and got a late second period goal from MJohn David to leave the score 5-1 after two periods. Hazelton made a gallant effort in the last period getting goals from Jerry Young, Richard Simms, and Winston Leary to make the score respectable.

Omineca 12 Juveniles 3
Omineca got four power play goals and a short-handed goal to defeat the Juveniles in their Saturday afternoon contest. Pete Tichner had four goals to lead Omineca and Lance Legouffe had three goals.

Tony Jakubowski, Rob Ebeling, and Garry Donald each scored for the Juveniles.

Terrace B 2 Rupert 14
Terrace B took their second beating in as many games as Greg Drummond got a hat trick for Rupert to lead them to a win in their first game of the round robin. Other scorers for Rupert were Frank Burns, Rob Toye, Mike Ciccone, Dave Baker, Ed Boudreau, Mark Hauptman, Paul Baker, and Ken Long. For Terrace it was Mike Lambert, and Rob Bell both getting goals in the second period.

Black Hawks 10 Juveniles 3
Dave Kawinsky scored all three Juvenile goals in a losing effort as the Juveniles lost to the stronger Kitimat team 10-3. Scoring for Kitimat were Colin Parr, Don McMartin and Brent Rogers. Getting two goals each were Steve Nelson and Lou Parent and Emil Gagnon got the hat trick.

Omineca 15 Hazelton 3
Omineca dominated their final round robin game and finished up in second place in their division behind the Black Hawks with this win over Hazelton. Chris Reneerkens had four goals and Lance Legouffe had three to lead Omineca. For Hazelton it was Ian Tromblay, Winston Leary and Jerry Young getting goals.

Kitimat A 10 Rupert 3
Kitimat handled Rupert easily in the final round robin game leaving Kitimat in first place in the division and Rupert in second place. Sylvain Gagnon and Stacy Smeader led Kitimat with two goals each. Bob Toye had a pair for Rupert and Greg Drummond added the other Rupert goal.

Downhill must wait- again!

SARAJEVO (CP) — There's a popular saying in Sarajevo — "You must wait."

Visitors and journalists from around the world, in town for the Winter Olympics, can rattle it off in half a dozen languages. But no one at the Games has faced a longer wait than the men's downhill skiers.

Their run for the gold medal has been postponed daily and organizers decided Sunday to surrender temporarily to an unending winter storm and forget the downhill until Thursday, a week later than the original starting date.

The female downhillers have faced a similar problem with their race, originally set for Saturday, now scheduled for Wednesday.

The men's race on Mount Bjelasnica and women's training on Mount Jahorina were both cancelled Sunday because of continuing high winds, heavy snow and fog.

"I guess we'll just fold our clothes differently," Gary Athans of Kelowna, B.C., said of his plans for the latest delay.

"And we'll get better at the video games. Everyone is playing them like crazy."

Video arcades are in constant use in the athletes' and media villages, and are especially popular with the athletes.

The waiting game is easier to play at the Olympics than on the World Cup circuit, simply because of the increased activities.

CHEER TEAMMATES
The Canadian skiers have spent many hours on dryland training, catching up on their reading and by now probably know downtown Sarajevo as well as some long-time residents. They have also turned into cheerleaders.

"Yes, we've seen a fair amount of the other sports," said Steve Podborski of Toronto. "We were at the hockey game the other night."

Sunday night, coach Joey Lavigne took his team to the pairs figure skating.

The postponement of the downhill to Thursday prompted Austrian officials to send three of their four downhillers home for a couple of days. The fourth remained because he also competes in giant slalom, which will now have both runs Tuesday.

The Canadians, of course, don't have that option.

"We've gone through a certain period of time away from home, whereas the Europeans probably spent a couple of days at home before coming to the Olympics, so that could be a disadvantage to us," said Athans.

The long delay may be a factor in the outcome of the men's race. A week of anxiety and tension could prove costly to some of the younger competitors.

Many of the veteran World Cup downhillers wonder out loud how American Billy Johnson, one of the gold medal favorites after excellent training times on the relatively easy course, will handle the wait.

YOUR INDIVIDUAL HOROSCOPE

FOR TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1984

ARIES

(Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)

You're not at your best today regarding social introductions. Extra home responsibilities take up much of your time.

TAURUS

(Apr. 20 to May 20)

You're willing to meet others halfway and your sincerity is appreciated. Some you meet today are flatterers, though.

GEMINI

(May 21 to June 20)

The work load increases, but you have the resolve to do your best. Financial gains are probable, but don't be extravagant.

CANCER

(June 21 to July 22)

Though you're not ready for a permanent commitment, you may find yourself becoming more attached. Children require supervision.

LEO

(July 23 to Aug. 22)

Your determination to tackle unfinished tasks is admirable, but stay clear of those who waste your time. Flirtations are risky.

VIRGO

(Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)

You'll speak up at a group meeting, but may be saddled with some responsibility. Watch spending in the pursuit of pleasure.

LIBRA

(Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)

Proper timing is the key to a career matter. Bring initial steps to their rightful conclusion. Attend to debts.

SCORPIO

(Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)

Don't put things off until the last minute. Get an early start and accomplishment is assured. Face up to challenges.

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)

Review credit card expenditures. See how much you're making in monthly payments. Paying a loan off now cuts down on interest.

CAPRICORN

(Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)

Though you'll help a loved one out with problems, remember also to be considerate of his or her feelings. Sometimes you're gruff.

AQUARIUS

(Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)

After an initial success careerwise, don't slacken efforts. Today it behooves you to stay with it. Consolidate your gains.

PISCES

(Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)

Children require your participation at a school event. You may be evading an issue with a loved one. Watch escapism today.

YOU BORN TODAY are adventurous but inclined to expediency. You're liable to take what chance throws your way. If you wish to excel, you should gamble on your own potential, which is great. You have an affinity for acting and the brokerage field. Know in your heart what you want to do and then prepare yourself with a good education. Too often, you're inclined to get by on your wits. You have a natural interest in human nature and would make a fine critic, writer or adviser. Birth date of: Jack Benny, comedian; Thelma Ritter, actress; and Carl Bernstein, reporter.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — MELLOW JAZZ FOR TARZAN AT JUNGLE CAFE: SWING MUSIC.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: B equals E.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

HEATHCLIFF

Ann Landers

In a recent letter a reader complained about inconsiderate slob who don't keep a pencil and pad next to the phone to take messages. May I speak for the slob?

First, you have no idea what I was doing when you called. Since I work a rotating shift, maybe you woke me up. Or I could have been holding a sick baby under one arm while trying to prepare supper.

Every sane my husband makes is important to us. That's why he had our home phone number printed on his business card along with his office number. But remember, please, when you call my husband at home and get me, I am not a secretary sitting at a desk ready to take shorthand.

Thanks for understanding. — Double-Duty Dora

Glad you found a pen to write to me. You defended a lot of people today. My thanks on behalf of all of them.

Metis seek new status

TORONTO (CP) — A high-level meeting on the constitutional rights of aboriginal people began here today with talks on the right of Metis to land.

The Metis National Council intends to press the federal and provincial ministers responsible for the Constitution for recognition that they are a distinct nation with a historic right to land in the West and parts of the territories, says spokesman Clem Chartier.

The Native Council of Canada, which represents Indians without federal status and some Metis, will also fight for Metis lands, but there are deep ideological splits between the two groups.

There is no definition of who Metis are, although they are generally considered to be offspring of European fur traders and Indian women who settled in the West during the last century.

The demand for Metis land is likely to be opposed by most provinces and the federal government at this final preparatory meeting before a constitutional conference on aboriginal rights in Ottawa March 8 and 9.

"I don't expect it will receive sufficient support to move ahead at this time," Manitoba Attorney General Roland Penner said as he entered the closed meeting.

However, if aboriginal rights for Metis are to mean anything they will eventually need land, said Penner, whose New Democrat government is seen as one of the strongest supporters of native rights.

Indian, Inuit and Metis representatives are meeting the federal and provincial ministers in a sealed floor of rooms in the plush King Edward Hotel.

The two-day conference will make final preparations for the Ottawa conference, to be chaired by the prime minister and attended by provincial premiers, native and territorial leaders.

National native groups want the Ottawa conference — the second of four planned to negotiate the rights of aboriginal people — to result in a constitutional amendment recognizing the principle of native self-government.

But senior Justice Department officials warned native leaders during the weekend that they are risking an impasse unless they lower their expectations.

Justice Minister Mark MacGuigan has proposed two options.

The first is a political agreement on a set of principles to guide a series of trial negotiations to create governments in selected native communities.

The second option is to conduct those negotiations in some native communities and report those results at the third constitutional conference on native rights in 1985.

Chartier, a Saskatchewan Metis leader, said his group won't settle for MacGuigan's proposed compromise.

It doesn't reflect the progress made and government groups have made during months of preparatory meetings, Chartier said. "It's clearly not enough."

The Manitoba government strengthened its demands to press for strengthened guarantees of aboriginal rights in the Constitution.

The Constitution now says aboriginal rights are "recognized and affirmed." Manitoba wants to add the word "guaranteed."

"That might go ahead," said Penner.

The Toronto meeting was being chaired today by British Columbia Senator Jack Austin, a Liberal cabinet minister.

MacGuigan, who normally chairs such meetings, was fobbed off in Ottawa but was expected to arrive later today. The conference ends Tuesday.

World leaders attend Soviet funeral

MOSCOW (AP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, U.S. Vice-President George Bush and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher are among the world leaders arriving today to pay their last respects to Soviet President Yuri Andropov.

Those heading for Andropov's funeral Tuesday in Red Square also include a Chinese Communist party Politburo member who will be the highest-ranking Chinese official to visit Moscow in 20 years.

Over the last two decades, the Communist rivals have been at odds over ideological, political and border disputes.

The Chinese official, Vice-Premier Wan Li, said today before leaving Peking that China and the Soviet Union are "two great neighbors" and he hoped for improved relations with Moscow.

Bush, en route to Moscow, told reporters in London he hopes his visit will make possible the resumption of the suspended U.S.-Soviet talks on limiting nuclear arms.

The vice-president, accompanied by his wife, Barbara, and U.S. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, a Tennessee Republican, indicated he was carrying a message from President Reagan but refused to elaborate.

"I am not going to reply on what I have in my pocket," he said, adding his visit would be a chance for the United States to "outline a broad context . . . of various kinds of contacts and discussions."

Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe arrived in Moscow Sunday. Also scheduled to attend the funeral and burial are West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and his foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher.

France is expected to be represented by Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy and Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson. French Communist party sources said a four-member delegation, headed by party chief Georges Marchais, would also attend.

President Sandro Pertini will head the Italian delegation, a spokesman for the president's office in Rome said. The Italian Embassy in Moscow said Enrico Berlinguer, leader of the Italian Communist party would also be present.

Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Greek Premier Andreas Papanastasiou and Syrian Prime Minister Abdel-Raouf al-Kasbi, accompanied by Syrian Defence Minister Lt.-Gen. Mustafa Tlass, also were expected to attend.

The Cuban Embassy declined to say whether President Fidel Castro would represent Cuba. A Romanian delegation led by President Nicolae Ceausescu will attend the funeral, Romania's state-run Agerpres news agency announced. President Mika Spiljak was representing Yugoslavia.

Other leaders planning to attend included Belgian Deputy Premier Jean Gol and Foreign Minister Leo Tindemans; Irish President Patrick Hillery and Foreign Minister Peter Barry; General Secretary Rashidi Kawawa of Tanzania, and Tunisian Foreign Minister Mbeji Caid Essebsi.

Also, Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek of the Netherlands; Prime Minister Paul Schluter of Denmark and Prince Henrik, consort of Queen Margrethe, and Premier Turgut Ozal of Turkey.

Bullet-riddled door presented

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — A bullet-riddled door was among the first exhibits introduced as evidence today as Judge Denys Dionne opened a long-delayed inquest into the Dec. 23 police shooting of carpet layer Serge Beaudoin.

The museum room of the Sherbrooke Seminary was packed with journalists, lawyers and curious onlookers as the door, with 21 bullet holes in it, was introduced by lawyer Francois Doyon, acting for the Crown.

It was through that motel room door that municipal police from Sherbrooke and nearby Rock Forest fired the volley of shots that killed Beaudoin, 33, and lightly wounded his workmate, Jean-Paul Beaumont, 32, two days before Christmas.

Police killed the motel, looking for the two men who had robbed and killed a Brink's guard the previous day. They apparently mistook Beaudoin and Beaumont for the wanted men. The Brink's killers and the $47,000 they stole have yet to be found.

The first witnesses at the inquest today were police technicians. Besides the mangled wooden door, exhibits filed included bullets that had lodged in the walls over the bed where Beaudoin was sleeping and four bullets that had slammed into a wall in an adjacent room where an Edmonton couple were sleeping.

Photographs of Room 5 at Le Chatillon motel, where the incident occurred, showed a bloodstain on the floor between Beaudoin's and Beaumont's beds.

SKETCHES ALLOWED

In his opening remarks, Dionne announced that artists would be allowed to make sketches at the inquest but he maintained the order he had issued last week barring photographers and cameramen, who are normally allowed to shoot pictures at Quebec inquests.

Dionne was appointed special coroner by the Quebec Justice Department two weeks ago, replacing Denis Boudrias, who was disqualified by a Quebec Superior Court judge at the request of the lawyer representing Sherbrooke police.

Lawyer Michel Proulx argued successfully that Boudrias had made remarks to the news media showing that he had prejudged the case.

Boudrias himself had been appointed special coroner in December after the regular Sherbrooke coroner withdrew because of his acquaintance with police officers implicated.

About 30 witnesses are to be called at the inquest, which is expected to last a week.

Coroners' inquests are held in Quebec to determine whether there is any criminal responsibility attached to violent or suspicious deaths. A coroner's finding is not binding on the Crown.

Gerry anguishes over grave

CALGARY (CP) — Dudley Gerry anguishes over a question revolving around two bodies — the one placed in his brother's grave after his death in the Second World War, and the one that remained undiscovered until last week in Dutch marshlands.

Gerry said in an interview that he is confused by the discovery of the second body.

"I'm just glad my parents weren't around to hear of this," he said of his mother and father, who died thinking Reginald Gerry had been identified and properly buried.

The confusion began when Dutch authorities said, recently they had discovered the remains of Reginald in marshlands. That was apparently where the young RAF pilot's Wellington bomber went down with a crew of five as it headed back towards Britain after an Aug. 3, 1940, bombing mission over the German city of Hamburg.

Tracked down in Calgary as the only likely relative of Reginald, Dudley told of the much earlier burial.

He was only 11 years old at the time, but he remembers Red Cross authorities informing his parents a body that had washed ashore from the sea had been identified as that of Reginald. The discovery was made three months after the plane was shot down.

Ron Liversuch, 62, another Calgary man with a brother whose remains were discovered two years ago in Holland, was enlisted by authorities to try and find Reginald's relatives. He found Dudley.

Liversuch, an RAF veteran, said there are still 70,000 Second World War airmen unaccounted for, many of them believed to have given to their deaths in the waterways and marshlands of the Netherlands.

Liversuch is planning to meet with Dudley in an attempt to unravel the mystery surrounding his brother.

Dudley remembers his older brother as a cowboy who took part in rodeos and broke wild horses before going to England in 1938 to join the RAF.

He has one vivid recollection of his older brother's cowboy days when Reginald rounded up 200 wild horses in the mountains and then halter-broke them during the summer of 1937.

He had always believed his brother was buried in a marked grave in Holland. But now he wonders just what happened.

"Dudley isn't sure what led to the identification of the second body. He suspects, however, it was probably made through a military 'dog tag'."

But Dudley can only speculate about what led to the identification of the first body.

Americans need lesson from Canada

EDMONTON (CP) — American foreign policy makers were advised to take a lesson from Canada on Sunday by Michael Manley, the former prime minister of Jamaica who fell out of favor with the United States while in office.

Speaking to a supportive audience of about 400 people at the University of Alberta, Manley praised Canadian policy in the Caribbean, which he said contrasts sharply with that of the United States.

"Canada has always had an extremely constructive role in the Caribbean," Manley said.

"And it is one of the notable things about Canadian foreign policy that it has never been sucked into this pattern of U.S. hegemonic behavior."

"It really is a remarkable thing, this distinction between U.S. and Canadian policy over the years."

A charismatic 58-year-old who has long championed the rights of the Third World, Manley was elected prime minister in 1972 and served until 1980, when he lost a bitterly contested election to current Prime Minister Edward Seaga.

More than 600 people were reported to have died in violence leading up to that election.

Brought to Edmonton to discuss U.S. foreign policy in the Third World, Manley described the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada last year as a "most dangerous precedent."

"And I think it is a precedent we are going to regret."

Manley said instead of sending troops to the island with such haste, the U.S. should have encouraged other Caribbean leaders to try to solve Grenada's problems by negotiations.

He chastised the U.S. for its role in Central America, where he said it props up corrupt right-wing regimes while trying to overthrow a government in Nicaragua that has the popular support of its people. He was also critical of the U.S. for refusing to deal diplomatically with Cuba.

"Cuba is there and it is going to remain there because it has the overwhelming support of its own people."

Manley said his own relations with the U.S.

began to sour in the mid-1970s because of Washington's inability to understand that Jamaica's support of the so-called non-aligned movement "was not a commitment to communism."

He said American aid was cut and the tourist trade dropped dramatically when the U.S. began telling tourists not to visit the island because "Manley has Cuban soldiers in the hills."

In an emotional 90-minute address that was interrupted several times by ovations from a large contingent of Jamaican students in the audience, Manley said the U.S. should realize that Third World countries must accept aid from wherever it is available. Acceptance of such aid isn't a commitment to Marxism, he said.

Manley is leader of Jamaica's People's National party, which boycotted December's national elections on the island. Left without a seat in Parliament as a result of the boycott, Manley leads the opposition from outside and is pressing the government for new elections this summer.

Rogue cop master of disguises

JOHANNESBURG (AP)

South Africa's most wanted criminal is a brazen bank robber and a master of disguise who once was a rising star on this capital city's police force.

He uses his advanced police training in armed robbery investigations and undercover work to lead a gang accused of about 20 bank robberies that netted them more than $400,000 in the past six months.

While Andre Stander's daring and high life outside the law has made him a household name, those trying to nab him are increasingly frustrated.

"We need all the luck we can get," complained one veteran of the search.

At the end of last week, there were reports that he may have already slipped past them into the United States.

Standar, 36, an outdoorsman said to enjoy poetry and late nights at the discos, is the son of a retired police commander.

He rose swiftly in the force, reaching the rank of captain when he was arrested in 1980 on charges stemming from 15 bank robberies and illegal possession of weapons.

Standar's father, retired Maj. Gen. Frans Standar, said his son turned to crime after being overcome by guilt at helping put down race riots in 1976. "He said what happened sickened him and he wanted to leave the force," Standar said.

However, nothing else has emerged to show politics or racial issues were a factor in his son's move to crime. According to records from his conviction, the younger Standar had been strapped for cash.

He pleaded guilty to the charges and was sentenced to 17 years in prison. Then, last Aug. 11, he and a habitual car thief overpowered guards while waiting to see a prison therapist and escaped in a police van. Unconfirmed reports had him dining in fancy restaurants, hiding in black townships, even sunning on the beach in Mauritius.

Two months later, an armed Standar burst into a prison testing centre and freed another of his jailhouse pals, a school-teacher-turned-armed-robber.

Newspapers labelled the three The Standar Gang, rechristening them The Bank Hoppers after they were suspected of knocking off two and three banks in one afternoon. One of those banks was a branch inside the terminal at Johannesburg's Jan Smuts International Airport, one of this terror-conscious country's more heavily policed targets.

Investigators admit Standar's strongest card is his intimate knowledge of police operations. He is acquainted with some of the officers tracking him and even broke into a patrol car and stole a sophisticated radio, ideal for eavesdropping on his pursuers.

The gang is believed to have received some of its weapons in a robbery of a gun store and is suspected in the thefts of several expensive cars.

Newspapers report Standar opened accounts at a bank he had robbed, raising the possibility that he may have fled to the United States.

The Sunday Express of Johannesburg said a South African matching Standar's description had been arrested in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., last week on a traffic charge, then was freed on bail.

Pension increase expected

OTTAWA (CP) — An increase in the guaranteed income supplement for 700,000 single pensioners in need seems almost certain to be announced in the federal budget speech Wednesday.

Boosting the supplement has long been one of Health Minister Monique Bégin's priorities, and all the indications are that the time is ripe for the Liberals to act.

Bégin has been talking for years about more help for poor single people over 65 as soon as the government has additional money to spend.

With reports of this year's federal deficit $2 billion lower than predicted, Finance Minister Marc Lalonde finally seems to have the leeway he needs.

And the prospect of a federal election in the foreseeable future is another reason for helping pensioners sooner rather than later.

The only questions left to be answered are how much the increase will be and when the first batch of larger monthly cheques will go in the mail.

A special Commons committee on pensions has called for immediate increases in the supplement of up to $102 a month. That would be enough to give all single pensioners a minimum monthly income of $644 and would cost the federal government an additional $350 million a year.

The speech from the throne opening the new session of Parliament in December promised legislation to raise the supplement, but offered no further details.

Conservative Leader Brian Mulroney endorsed the idea last week, but he was every bit as vague about details as the Liberals have been.

The last increase in the supplement resulted from a promise made during the 1980 election campaign and amounted to $35 a month extra for each household.

Many experts say a much larger increase is needed this time if the goal is to bring most single pensioners out of poverty.

Even a minimum income of $644 a month — or $7,728 a year — would still leave many pensioners below the unofficial poverty lines for their areas. Further supplements provided by some provincial governments would push some, but not all of these people over the lines.

The poverty lines for a single person in 1983 ranged from $7,052 a year in rural areas to $9,538 for those living in cities of half a million or more.

Ontario Treasurer Larry Grossman promised to do his part Sunday by adding about $70 million a year to his province's supplement for single elderly people.

The federal budget speech could also provide more details of the government's plans for pension reform, but at best these will be limited to private pension plans that fall under federal jurisdiction.

The Liberals have promised changes in the Pension Benefits Standards Act to improve coverage of private plans, to protect the benefits of workers who change jobs and to provide more generous survivors' pensions.

Twins a bonus

CINCINNATI (AP) — A woman who tried unsuccessfully for five years to conceive before her "test-tube" pregnancy said Sunday she and her husband considered it a bonus when she had twins.

The couple, identified only by their first names, Mark and Jean, met with reporters at Christ Hospital to show off newborns Laura Kimberly and Brian William. Brian, the more active of the two infants, squirmed and began to squeal in the glow of television camera lights.

"I didn't expect to be this lucky," Jean said as she cradled her daughter. "We have been on an adoption list for several years."

The twins, delivered Tuesday by caesarean-section surgery at Christ Hospital, were Ohio's first to be born from in-vitro fertilization, hospital spokesman Gail Myers said. There have been two single children born previously in Ohio from the process, she said.

IMPLANTED IN WOMB
Eggs are extracted from the mother and fertilized with the father's sperm in a laboratory dish, then implanted in the woman's womb. The technique allows women with blocked fallopian tubes — which carry the egg to the uterus — to bear children.

Jean said she and her husband were surprised at the media interest generated by the twins' birth. She said the couple declined to give their last names on the advice of her obstetrician, Dr. Robert Burkett, to avoid possible adverse public reaction.

The Cincinnati couple, married for nine years, said they began trying to have children in 1979. In October 1982, they heard about an in-vitro fertilization program conducted by Dr. Moon Kim, a specialist at Ohio State University in Columbus. Since there were no in-vitro programs at that time in Cincinnati, Jean said she contacted Kim and applied for his program.

Although the pregnancy rate for women who undergo in-vitro fertilization is only about 20 per cent, Jean became pregnant on the first attempt. She found out in her 10th week of pregnancy that she was carrying twins.

Computers help the hogs

RIVERTON, Man. (CP) — The computer is hoofing its way into the hog barns of the nation.

"You have to have (a computer) if you're any kind of a hog farmer at all," says Kris Olafson, who produces pigs by computers in this central Manitoba community.

"You can't look at a hog computer program and say 'I don't want it.'"

Use of computers in the hog industry will be the theme of a seminar in Riverton later this week which about 150 Manitoba pork producers are expected to attend.

The computer handles a variety of sorting routines for the farmer, Olafson said. "And it tells you how many sows the boars bred in a particular month and what the conception rate is — there's really no limit."

Clarence Froese, a Manitoba government swine specialist, doubts the computer will revolutionize the industry "but hopefully it will improve its efficiency."

Diana pregnant

LONDON (AP) — Diana, the 22-year-old Princess of Wales and wife of Prince Charles, is expecting the couple's second baby in late September, Buckingham Palace announced today.

A palace spokesman said Diana, who returned Sunday night from a one-day trip to Oslo, Norway, is in "excellent health."

The spokesman said the prince and princess told Queen Elizabeth and Diana's parents about the pregnancy a few days ago and "both families are delighted."

"She is in perfect health at the moment and certainly we are going to try to make sure that none of her planned engagements are cancelled," said the spokesman, who spoke on the condition his name not be used.

He said the couple expects to continue public engagements until early August.

Diana and Charles often had said they wanted more than one child. The palace spokesman said they have "no known preference" as to whether the baby is a boy or girl.

The baby, whatever the sex, will be third in line to the throne, behind the 35-year-old Charles and the couple's first child, Prince William, who was born June 21, 1982.

Charles married Diana in St. Paul's Cathedral on July 29, 1981.

The princess went to Oslo on Sunday for a special performance of Carmen by the London City Ballet Company.

Association funds reduced

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan's decision to remove U.S. troops from Beirut but to escalate shelling from navy ships was a compromise to accommodate the vastly differing views of State Secretary George Shultz and Defence Secretary Caspar Weinberger, a White House official says.

"The policy is a balance between the two views, but also a balance that everybody agrees to — that is, you continue to support a U.S. diplomatic position in the Middle East, at the same time according more protection to the marines," said the official, insisting on anonymity.

Weinberger, and apparently the joint chiefs of military staff, were known to believe that the 1,500 marines in Beirut as part of a multinational force were extremely vulnerable and serving no useful military purpose.

On the other hand, Shultz was reported to have disagreed strongly with attempts within the Reagan administration to withdraw the marines since he believed their presence was vital to supporting the shaky Lebanese government of Amin Gemayel.

Reagan's new policy, announced a week ago, in effect satisfied the concerns of both men: Shultz agreed to withdrawal of the marines to ships offshore in exchange for the increased authority of U.S. ships to fire on Syrian-held positions in Lebanon.

But the initial uncertainty angered several congressmen, including Republicans, who said they got the impression from Reagan's announcement that the withdrawal would be imminent.

The White House official said the confusion stemmed from the fact that the conditions in Lebanon had changed dramatically from the time the withdrawal was under initial consideration until it was announced.

Originally, he said, the withdrawal process might have taken three or four months, but once the Lebanese cabinet resigned and the situation there began to deteriorate rapidly, the timetable was moved up.

Traveling stars coddled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ever see Barbra Streisand being jostled at a luggage carousel, or Cary Grant standing in a long check-in line at Los Angeles International Airport?

Probably not, thanks to an elite group of travel experts, who cater to globe-trotting celebrities.

While a handful of Beverly Hills travel agents specialize in handling the pre-flight paperwork, people such as Peggy Ganopole and Tom Stout nurse VIPs from limo to first-class lounge seat.

This routinely involves handling all check-in chores, fending off autograph hounds while whisking the star to a celebrity lounge or aircraft and retrieving luggage. But it's the little extras that make certain celebrity stand-ins extra popular with their clients.

Stout and others talked about their on-the-job experiences in a Los Angeles Times article Sunday.

Stout says he makes sure there's a Fresca on board when Richard Burton is a passenger, and Perrier for others.

He is also not above sneaking a celebrity's mistress aboard a plane while the client is kissing his wife good-bye in the VIP lounge.

When Stout learned Streisand loathes airline meals, he left the airport to fetch Chinese food and a banana split he delivered just before her jet departed for London.

A chain-smoking man in his 50s who is happy to share a gin with a departing client, Stout thrives on crises. He recalls one time when Grant boarded a jet to New York to say good-bye to his then-wife Dyan Cannon, and then decided to accompany her. Stout quickly arranged for a ticket.

The stars often reciprocate with gifts. Once, Stout recalls, Frank Sinatra gave him a Christmas tree decorated with $50 and $100 bills.

Ganopole, a former TWA flight attendant, is employed by the Ask Mr. Foster travel agency to handle airport chores not only for the likes of Paul Newman, Tom Selleck, Cliff MacGraw and Ali Robertson, but — as does Stout — for entire film companies.

During filming of the Winds of War miniseries, she dispatched tons of luggage and equipment to locations worldwide.

One of her most unusual moments on the job occurred several months ago when tenor Luciano Pavarotti learned it was her birthday and belted out a few bars of Happy Birthday in the midst of a crowded terminal.

Election expensive

LAGOS (AP) — Maj.-Gen. Muhammed Buhari, who seized power in a New Year's Eve coup, has ruled out a prompt return to civilian government, saying Nigeria's troubled economy cannot support the expense of elections.

"We cannot afford any expenditure now to bring (back) Fedeco (the Federal Electoral Commission), start buying boxes, ballot papers, getting elections and sending the police to supervise them," he said in an interview published in the Lagos Sunday Concord newspaper.

Federal, state and local elections last summer are believed to have cost Nigeria the equivalent of $800 million.

Buhari was quoted as saying his government — which has accused civilian leaders of unchecked corruption — will investigate those expenditures.

Nigeria's oil-based economy has declined sharply in the past five years, due largely to weakened international demand for petroleum. The country's external debt has been estimated at more than $34 billion.

Buhari on other occasions has said that reviving the economy in the country of nearly 100 million people, Africa's most populous state, is among his government's top priorities.

The Dec. 31 military takeover ended four years of civilian government under a presidential system. All political parties have been banned and dozens of former civilian leaders detained.

Buhari was quoted by the newspaper as saying: "I am here by accident. And I hope I'll get out in one piece." The account contained no elaboration of those remarks.

U.S. holds line

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's spokesman urged new Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko today to work with the United States toward "greater mutual understanding and constructive co-operation."

Hours after Chernenko was chosen to succeed Yuri Andropov as head of the Soviet Communist party, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said any meeting between the new Soviet leader and Reagan would have to be "well prepared" and would depend on a "reasonable promise for success in results," the criteria that has been applied in the past to such a conference.

Speakes told reporters: "We invite the new leaders of the Soviet Union to work with us in establishing a basis for greater mutual understanding and constructive co-operation. This would apply to Mr. Chernenko and others who serve in institutional positions of authority in the Soviet Union."

Speakes said Vice-President George Bush, who will attend Andropov's funeral in Moscow on Tuesday, will "stress our commitment to peace and, in particular, to the search for mutually acceptable agreements" during his discussions in the Soviet capital.

Reagan, meanwhile, ended a five-day vacation near Santa Barbara on Sunday and flew back to the White House in Washington.

Although Reagan didn't specify the timetable for the troop withdrawal in his announcement, subsequent estimates from administration officials ranged from a few days to three or four months.

The most recent estimate, said an administration official, is that all but a force of 200 assigned to guard the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, will be out within a month.

Burts are worried

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eddy Burt, 11, and his 71-year-old grandmother Ruth Burt know don't expect to save the world on their own.

But over the next six months, they and 14 other ordinary citizens make their effort to encourage world peace.

"I worry about nuclear war," said Eddy, a shy Grade 5 student whose family follows the Quaker religion which believes in pacifism.

Thirteen Canadians, two Americans and a European leave Vancouver today for Germany to begin a self-financed, six-month peace caravan through more than 23 countries in Europe and North America — including the Soviet Union and the United States.

"I think we can help make people feel better about one another and not want to fight so much," said Eddy who lives in the small Kootenay community of Johnson's Landing.

"That is the purpose of the 150-city tour, said Sigurd Askevold, 66, a retired Creston high school teacher who organized the project, billed as the Peace and Friendship Caravan International.

"We hope to break down distrust, help overcome ignorance among nations and to re-establish trust and friendship," said Askevold.

He said the group hopes to meet with officials from each country they visit.

Group members range in age from 11 to 73, and include a doctor, nurse, therapist, college student, freelance journalist, school teachers, and retired people.

"I want this to be a good world for my grandchildren to grow up in," said Ruth Burt. "I thought this was one of the most important things I could do now."

Ford boosted

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. announced today it earned $1.87 billion in 1983, ending a string of three huge year-end losses. The performance boosted the U.S. auto industry's earnings to record levels.

Ford's 1983 earnings were in contrast to a loss of $657.8 million in 1982, $236 million of that in the fourth quarter. The automaker earned $781 million in the fourth quarter of last year.

Ford had staggering losses in 1980 and 1981, $1.55 billion and $1.06 billion, respectively. The losses came at the height of the U.S. auto slump and would have been worse for Ford had it not made money on its vast overseas operations.

The company's last profitable year was 1979, just before the start of the slump, when it rolled up earnings of $1.17 billion.

Automotive industry analysts have predicted that Chrysler will sail past its record year-end earnings of $422.6 million in 1983. It made $582.6 million in the first three quarters of 1983.

General Motors reported last week it made a record profit of $3.7 billion on sales of $74.6 billion.

Officials at American Motors Corp. have said the No. 4 U.S. carmaker will earn a profit for the fourth quarter but have made no prediction for the year as a whole. AMC has racked up 14 consecutive quarters in the red.

The other two major makers of automobiles in the United States, Volkswagen of America Inc. and Honda of America Manufacturing Inc., do not report earnings separate from their parent companies in West Germany and Japan.

All About PEOPLE

John Rosen of San Francisco is mad at Mazda. He hates Hondas. He despises Datsun and is revolted by Renault.

Rosen, proud owner of a 1959 Dodge Coronet and head of the Foreign Car-Haters of America, loathes all foreign cars, regardless of color, seat material or number of options.

Rosen, 38, came to the United States from England 12 years ago, took over a decaying garage in San Francisco and began repairing and restoring U.S.-built autos.

On Feb. 5, his plucky band of Detroit-lovers vented their spleen by demolishing a Datsun with sledgehammers.

"It all boils down to patriotism," he says. "Every one of our members has one powerful conviction — that only idiots drive foreign cars, and foreign cars make idiots out of normal people."

Normand Leveille, who suffered a paralyzing stroke while playing with Boston Bruins last season, received a standing ovation at Boston Garden on Saturday, a day after he reached a court settlement with the National Hockey League club for $162,500.

Leveille, who has shown remarkable recovery but is still incapacitated since suffering the stroke in October 1982, was introduced before the start of a game between the Bruins and Edmonton Oilers as "a very special Bruin."

The standing ovation, which lasted more than a minute, began as Leveille walked from the runway to the end of the Bruins bench. Wearing his old jersey No. 19 and walking with a cane, he smiled at the crowd and waved with his left hand. His right is paralysed.

The $162,500 award represents the remaining financial benefits of the contract Leveille, then 19, had with the Bruins when he collapsed between periods in a game at Vancouver.

Julia Karam, a councillor in Cochrane, Ont., is tired of being left out in the dark.

Hoping to shed a little light on matters in Northern Ontario, Karam sponsored a resolution asking that daylight time begin on the last Saturday in March instead of the last Saturday in April, as is currently the practice.

Karam said the change is particularly necessary in the North because of long winters and early darkness. Ernie White, president of the Northeastern Ontario Municipal Association, which supported the resolution, said he'll lobby the federal government for the change.

Britain's largest firm of bookmakers, William Hill, reported Saturday that veteran Communist party ideologist Konstantin Chernenko was the favorite, at even money, to become the new Soviet leader.

A spokesman said Defence Minister Dmitri Ustinov received some "heavy backing" Saturday, however, and the firm had reduced Friday's odds on him from 7-1 to 7-2, meaning a $2 bet would win $7 plus the $2 stake.

Odds on the other contenders: Grigoriy Romanov 5-2, Mikhail Gorbachev 7-2, Viktor Grishin 6-1 and Mikhail Solomentsev 7-1.

Retired school teacher Sigurd Askevold wanted to contribute to world peace. It took him three years to figure out exactly how.

The Creston, B.C., resident and 15 others — ranging in age from 11 to 73 — will set out Sunday from Vancouver on a five-month, 50,000-kilometre journey that will take them to 23 countries.

In each country, they hope to meet with political leaders and peace groups.

"We're just ordinary people," says Askevold. "We have a doctor, a journalist, two teachers, four students, a grandmother and her 11-year-old grandson."

He said the participants raised money for the trip themselves.
